MONTGOMERY JOB CORPS STUDENTS SERVE THEIR COMMUNITIES
Montgomery Job Corps Center Donated 4,415 Hours to Volunteer Projects in 2004

ATLANTA – Montgomery Job Corps students displayed their talents and skills as well as their love for their communities by contributing 4,415 hours of community service in 2004, more than doubling last year's mark.

Whether restoring Montgomery's historic landmarks, hosting area blood drives or even volunteering for civic beautification, students at the Montgomery Job Corps Center put their job skills training to use and made a lasting impact in the communities around them.

"Job Corps has been making a difference in the lives of our students and our neighbors since its founding 40 years ago," said Job Corps Atlanta Region Director Don Scott. "Giving back to the communities where our centers are located is one of the most important things we do as a program each year."

Students at Montgomery JCC worked with more than 20 organizations in 2004. Volunteer projects included: assisting with National Red Ribbon Week, serving as tutorial aides for the Boys & Girls Club and coordinating the collection and distribution of food baskets for needy families. Throughout the year, Montgomery JCC worked with organizations such as Alabama State University, the American Cancer Society, Community Care Health Network, the Montgomery Improvement Association, The Salvation Army and the YMCA.

"Job Corps has been making a difference in the lives of the nation's youth since its inception, and it's vital that we teach our students the importance of giving back to their communities," Scott said. "This year we are celebrating our 40th Anniversary, and there's no better way to commemorate this occasion than by making a difference in the communities that have provided support and encouragement to each of our centers for the last four decades."
